

This wildly funny Pulitzer Prize-winning new play comes to Broadway following a critically acclaimed, sold-out run at The Public Theater. Playwright James Ijames and Director Saheem Ali reinvent Shakespeare’s masterpiece, creating what The New York Times calls “a hilarious yet profound tragedy smothered in comedy.”

Juicy is a queer, Southern college kid, already struggling with some serious questions of identity, when the ghost of his father shows up in their backyard, insisting that Juicy avenge his murder. It feels like a familiar story to Juicy, well-versed in Hamlet’s woes. But revenge doesn’t come easy to him, a sensitive and self-aware young Black man in search of his own happiness and liberation. From an uproarious family cookout emerges a compelling examination of love and loss, pain and joy.
